Extract of a Letter from Meſſ. Ware and Son, of Whitehaven, Printers, addreſſed to Mr. B. Cornwell, Conduit-ſtreet, Hanover-ſquare, London, dated June 28, 1786.

SIR,

MR. WILLIAM WOODBURN, of Whitehaven, in the County of Cumberland, a Perſon in an advanced Age, had been, for the laſt Two Years, ſubject to Pains in the Bowels, which, though at firſt not very violent, had gradually increaſed till the Diſorder became very alarming. Aſſiſtance had been called in from Time to Time, and a Variety of Medicines applied, but without any good Effect; on the contrary the Malady became ſtill greater, and a Train of other Complaints ſucceeded, which deprived the Patient of his natural Reſt, emaciated his Body, almoſt totally deſtroyed his Appetite, and threatened a ſpeedy Diſſolution. Without any Proſpect of finding a Remedy for theſe complicated Evils, but in the Hope of procuring a temporary Relief from the moſt excruciating Pains which generally attacked him with great Virulence in the Evening, he was prevailed upon (chiefly by the Perſuaſions of a Neighbour who had experienced the ſalutary Effects of it) to try your Oriental Vegetable Cordial. The firſt Quantity taken as preſcribed by the Bill of Directions, reached the Diſorder: He inſtantly felt an Alleviation of the Pain: At the proper Time he repeated the Doſe; a Change took Place in a few Hours throughout his whole Syſtem, and the next Day he eat with ſuch an Appetite as he had been a ſtranger to for ſeveral Months. Before one Half of the Second Bottle was uſed he found himſelf perfectly reſtored; his Appetite was good, his Sleep ſound and refreſhing, and his whole Frame invigorated in a Manner which aſtoniſhed all who had ſeen him in his late debilitated Condition.

It is now Three Months ſince his Cure was effected, during which Time there has been no Return of the Diſorder, nor any Viſitation whatever foreign to thoſe Infirmities which are connected with the Period of Life he has arrived at.—In Gratitude to the Author of ſo valuable a Medicine, and through Friendſhip to thoſe who may now labour under the ſame Afflictions which were lately ſo ſeverely felt by him, he has authorized this Public Declaration of his Caſe, fully convinced that (under the Bleſſing of God) he owes this extraordinary Recovery to the Virtues of the Oriental Cordial.

We have ſeveral other Teſtimonials of the Efficacy of this Medicine, ſome of which will be particularized at a future Opportunity.
